Product Description

- Shoppers monitoring body composition want more than just a standard weight number. The moment they see full body composition data, regular scales look obsolete.
- Full body composition tracking is the new standard in health retail. Customers who once bought basic scales now specifically ask for smart ones, and the Ekko scale puts you ahead of that trend.
- Gyms, physiotherapists, and personal trainers recommend these devices to clients daily. Stocking this product makes you the go to destination for their referred clients.
- Health food and supplement stores serve customers already actively tracking their progress. Someone buying protein powder and creatine needs a tool to make their hard work visible.
- This is a high satisfaction purchase that gets used every single morning. This daily engagement means buyers actively talk about it and recommend your store as a trusted health gear source.
