Product Description

- Outdoor athletes who train in remote terrain take their gear seriously. They are willing to invest in a watch that handles extreme conditions without failing.
- Extreme durability is a requirement, not a luxury. Outdoor customers have had gear fail on them in the field before, making a highly rugged build a top priority.
- Farming communities and rural adventurers are heavily underserved in this category. Because they rarely have local access to high-level GPS tech, stocking it makes you a go to destination.
- The watch requires no explanation when placed directly alongside hiking gear and running accessories. Keeping it visible where the target audience already shops ensures natural discovery.
- Adventure and trail running communities are heavily driven by word of mouth. One member finding a reliable tracking device will actively send their entire group your way.
